Description

We subscribed to CBS All Access and were excited to watch the football game with our family. My daughter is 3 years old and watches nothing scarier on television than Sesame Street. In other words, we work hard to filter content that may terrify our daughter or work its way into the subconscious of her impressionable mind.

With that in mind, we turned on the game and sat down with popcorn for Superbowl to begin. The moment we turned on the live streaming channel, an ad featured some kind of demonic movie called "US" dragging a young child under a bed to kill them. Seriously?! We couldn't find the remote to turn it off and grabbed our daughter to take her out of the room while she cried in terror.

Is this content you want seen by the millions of children watching the game with their parents?

Is this the content CBS wants to put at the front line for their newest subscribers assuming children are in the room? Is mature content now standard children's programming?

We are considering not renewing our subscription because of this.

I have already begun escalating this issue with the FCC.

What is your solution to this?

Sincerely,

(b) (6)

Description

My 7 year-old daughter is in tears after being subjected to the commercial for the horror movie "Us" that just aired in the SuperBowl kickoff show. As an adult, I found the commercial's content startling and disturbing; my daughter is horribly upset and frightened. I don't know what your standards and process are for reviewing content for TV viewing, but that was a rated R commercial as far as I am concerned and should NOT have been shown when millions of families with children are watching live TV.

I was watching the Super Bowl pregame show with my family when an advertisement for the horror film "Us" came on the television. The imagery is terrifying and I am thankful my four year old wasn't watching the T.V. at the time. Maybe it is time to start rating commercials and only allowing them to be aired with programming that has the same rating.

Description

This year's super bowl halftime show featured a shirtless, heavily tattooed man (Adam Levine of Maroon 5) that my entire family and friends found very indecent and unnecessary to watch. In the middle of the early evening, there should not be on television someone bearing that number of tattoos and be construed as acceptable or without controversy. A nipple of a woman is far more acceptable, acceptable and natural than innumerable tattoos covering most of someone's torso and upper extremities, regardless of how toned or good looking the person is. I consider myself fairly socially liberal and even I thought this was too much, especially for children.

Description

During the halftime show one of the performers was swearing during the song and the swears were blanked out. Do I have to sit with my kids during the superbowl and explain to them what's going on? Is it too much to ask that the most watched event in America uses a little self control and has a performer at halftime who doesn't swear in their songs?

Description

I was offended when the musician Adam Levine removed his shirt during this year's Super Bowl halftime performance. Young children and those with common decency should not have to be exposed to that man's nipples. That type of content should be limited to the safe harbor hours.

City/State/Zip: Virginia Beach, Virginia 23452

Description

While watching network broadcast TV with my young children, I was forced to turn off the television for fear that Adam Levine would end his performance without any clothes. I had to reach for the remote when his shirt came off (the third item of clothing to be stripped. The slow deliberate, and clearly rehearsed strip show deserves a fine of not only CBS but of the band as well. Given the clearly-sanctioned nature of this wildly-inappropriate stunt, I would hope the FCC will send a message that this must be reserved for cable-only programming. Or perhaps be forced to bear a more mature content rating at very least.

Company Complaining About: Comcast

Description

Yesterday I had a Super Bowl Party with a house full of guests. There is a problem with our main set box and I have expressed those complaints with Comcast on several occasions along with a piece of garbage remote they still have not set after promising me they should. The main setbox was one hour BEHIND the televising of the SuperBowl While the rest of the world was going into the halftime show, my TV was telecasting the beginning of the 2nd quarter. I called my local CBS station and the problem wasn't there. I called Comcast and the first agent I spoke with treated me disrespectfully and then hung up on me. I pay a lot of money for service I am not receiving. Their misguided "solution" was for me to go to the nearest Comcast office and trade in my remote and set box. Why should I have to go out of my way, spend MY time to resolve THEIR problems? I was told to unplug the box, wait a few seconds and plug it back in and wait for it to reboot. WELL, when we did that, we not only missed the rest of the second quarter, but the halftime show as well--with a house full of guests. They said they could send a technician and when I told them I should not have to pay for a service call, they said to schedule it and if I got charged, dispute the charge. Have you ever tried to dispute charges from Comcast? They essentially ignore your request and if you don't pay they threaten to shut down your service. So I did not schedule the service call as I cannot afford the $70+ dollars they would inevitably charge me. So, as a result of the crappy equipment Comcast provides, my guests missed seeing the entire game and the halftime show. Their blatant disrespect for their customers is breathtaking. And the last agent I spoke with told me they were having issues with the DVR's and the setboxes but never even bothered to notify me, but they were "working hard to resolve the problems." BUT I am not and have not been receiving the services I pay dearly for. Please help! Thanks

Description

It is ridiculous that Janet Jackson was forced to issue an apology, and CBS fined, over the accidental exposure of her nipple at the 2004 halftime show, but Adam Levine took his shirt off for part of his performance at the 2019 halftime show. CBS should be fined. Otherwise it is a complete double standard.

Description

During the NFL's SuperBowl halftime show, Adam Levine chose to purposefully take over his shirt during his performance, exposing his chest area and both nipples to the millions of people watching. His indecent exposure was witnessed by countless untold young children during this family-oriented broadcast. The FCC chose to levy a $550,000 fine against CBS for Janet Jackson's breast/nipple exposure and the same thing needs to happen in this case, lest you appear to display hypocrisy and double standards.

Description

Adam Levine without a shirt on for part of the Super Bowl halftime show was obscene. No one could possibly believe that had an artistic value. His overtly sexual lyrics combined with being half naked was not just tasteless it was obscene, offensive, and indecent. A flagrant exhibition of his body and sexuality, and that has nothing to do with sports.

Performer, Adam Levine, was shirtless on national television, for an elongated period of time. Viacom was levied a fine in 2004 for performer, Janet Jackson, appearing shirtless. We are seeking an equitable punishment. Also, please refer us to the FCC rules for broadcast decency, and, specifically, topless acts.

Description

It is extremely distasteful for Adam Levine of Maroon 5 to display vestigial male nipples on live television where any child can see these evolutionary leftovers. If the FCC punished Janet Jackson for showing her functioning nipples in 2004, they must immediately fine Adam Levine for displaying his vestigial nipples. The fine should also be doubled as Levine displayed double the nipple.

I am insulted by the exposure of Adam Levine's nipples during the Super Bowl half time show. Not because I am offended by the sight of another human's nipples, but because of the hypocrisy that it did not spark an immediate apology from CBS. I thought we were trying to get past treating men and women differently in this country. CBS should immediately apologize and be fined.
